

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

SATURDAY EVE., MARCH 31, 1883

ROSSER & MCCARTHY,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

A PRETTY girl has sent us word
To mind out how we walk,
Or else we're going to hear from her
Some very solemn talk.
The threat we feel compelled to say,
The needed thickens lacks,
Because, to talk, she'd be obliged
To lay aside her wax.

THE BULLETIN office has got a new water bucket and dipper. What will the hell hounds of the opposition say to this?

THE funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler will take place from the family residence this afternoon at two o'clock. Services by Rev. S. B. Alderson.

MR. KENDALL MORGAN, chief clerk of the Boston, is taking a vacation of two weeks, and the office of that boat will, in the meantime, be managed by Messrs. Henry Holloway and Harry Bruce.

MR. GEORGE ORT, JR., furniture dealer on Sutton street, is receiving daily, the latest styles of furniture of all kinds. He has some exceedingly handsome goods, and is prepared to offer prices that will give entire satisfaction.

A GENTLEMAN who has lately made a trip over the main line of the Kentucky Central speaks in the most complimentary manner of Conductor John Throckmarten. He says he is one of the most polite and obliging officers he has ever met.

MESSRS. BIERBOWER & Co. have bought the interest of Mr. A. J. Egnew in the stove and tinware business, and will continue the same at the old stand. They have just received a new and well selected stock of goods to which they invite attention.

THE following is from the Covington news of the Equir: Mr. Will H. Pickett, son of Prof. Joseph Desha Pickett, Superintendent of Public Instruction, was in the city yesterday looking up his father's chances for re-election. This county will be in line for Pickett.

AMONG the new styles of ladies' shoes ordered this season by Mr. A. M. Rogers, is one that strikes the BULLETIN as the identical thing to set off a pretty foot. It is a patent leather box button shoe and is the very latest novelty in that line. The new styles are arriving every day.

THE wedding bells will be jingling again soon—this time at Minerva. Mr. Philip White on the 5th proximo will lead to the altar Miss Mary Darlington, the ceremony to take place at the Catholic Church. The BULLETIN wishes the happy couple good luck all their lives.

SOL. SMITH RUSSELL, the great comedian, whose brilliant success this season is so well known, will appear at the Opera House, in this city, April 9th, in "Edgewood Folks." As Mr. Russell is a great favorite in this city it is hardly necessary to say he will be warmly welcomed, as he has always been heretofore.

ROOMS for house keeping and small dwellings are in great demand just now. Scarcely a day passes that inquiry is not made at this office regarding such accommodations. The Building Association has a fine opportunity to be of great service in building up the city and supplying this need.

FRANK R. PHISTER has some very handsome goods and one thing that we noticed as especially worthy of mention, is a book entitled "Sunshine for Little Children," a collection of entertaining and instructive articles and filled with fine engravings. Two very fine lithographs go with each number and the price for all is only fifty cents.

MARRIAGE and giving in marriage is going on at a lively rate across the river in Brown county, and the Maysville furniture dealers, will, if they can take a hint, order a new supply, of cradles. Here is the record for the past week:
J. J. Scruton and J. B. Everton.
Y. J. McCracken and Lucy Fannie Evans.
John I. Howard and Mary E. Keer.
A. H. Porter and W. E. Flaucher.
Adam Faul and Anna Mary Kuntz.

THE concert at the Opera House last night by the young ladies of Maysville was well attended and exceedingly entertaining. The voices were all good and the selections rendered very pleasingly. All present were much gratified, and we are very certain those who failed to attend, if they knew the pleasure they missed, will find in it a source of regret. It was certainly a well managed and well presented entertainment.

He Didn't Go Along.

A representative of the BULLETIN, yesterday afternoon, guided by an evil star ventured into a business house that had as many people about the counters as if it had been a small-pox hospital with a yellow flag flying at the outside. There was a cordial, inviting air about the place that prompted you to look around to see if a shot-gun was aimed at you or a bull-dog about to be unchained.

"No," said the proprietor crustily, "I don't want to do any advertising. I had my name painted on the fence about three years ago, but it was a dead loss and I have regretted it ever since."

THE BULLETIN man squared himself for action. He assailed him with eloquence on the flank, up the center and across the middle. The hot fire was returned with red-pepper, gall and wormwood, the engagement lasting about an hour. But at the end he was not a bit disorganized and quite as unimpressible as if he had been a bank clerk of twenty years standing. Finally, with a determination not to be routed, the BULLETIN man offered him advertising space for nothing, proposed to throw in a chromo, and stood ready, if the worst came to the worst, to clinch the bargain by giving him free tickets to the next circus.

"I am almost persuaded," this enterprising man of business did reply, "to take half a square for a couple of hours, but upon reflection I remember that I have a horse-shoe nailed over the door, and that I make it a point to see the new moon over my left shoulder once a month. That I think is sufficient, so I don't believe I will go along with you this trip."

And he didn't.

POOL SELLING.

The Mysteries and Manipulations of Paris Mutuels as Explained by General Buford.

We take the following from the Louisville Evening Post which copied it from General Buford's corner of Dunten's Spirit of the Turf. We are pleased to learn that the General has become interested in the success of our trotting meeting and will be present, and will give us an article in the Spirit of the Turf on the surroundings of Maysville. Our beautiful race course he says, is in every respect equal for either trotting or running to any in the country:

Now that the campaign of 1883 is upon us, and on which so many millions of money will be staked, it will not be out of place to discuss the different modes of betting now in vogue on the various grounds of the jockey clubs in the country, by inquiring into the practices, as well as the rules and regulations, governing this betting. As men and women, too, will bet on a horse race, as well as on the future price of grain, it becomes the duty of the public, as far as it is in their power, by exposing the fraudulent manipulations and practices, if any, in the bucket shops or on the Jockey Club grounds. By reference to the sermon delivered in Brooklyn, N. Y., by the Rt. Rev. DeWitt Talmage which was styled by the Courier-Journal a Buford sermon, the different styles of betting on a horse were elaborately and minutely explained. On reading this sermon we were struck with the great familiarity the reverend gentleman evidently possessed on the subject, and concluded, with strong reasons to prove the conviction, that he had gained this complete knowledge of the subject by actual experience. Be that as it may, he most assuredly understood the subject, and if ministers and Christians will occasionally "lay a wager," it becomes the duty of all turf editors to see they are not taken advantage of. In the same sermon referred to it was gratifying indeed to find that so grand a man as Talmage fully endorsed the liberal position taken by General Buford on the question of church and turf. On a horse race there are several styles of betting—the auction pools, book-betting and French mutuels, the most elegant and fashionable of which is the French mutuels, as at many of the most popular racing points you can see the first ladies of the land sending their maids of honor or escorts to purchase a few French mutuel tickets. It is this style of betting that we wish to investigate just now.

There are used in this betting a number of machines or boxes, that are built for the express purpose, with some little machinery about them; a crank, an indicator and a face, on which is placed all the names of the horses that are to run in the race. There are usually from two to one-half dozen machines in operation at the same time, all of which are under the command and management of a gentleman who is styled the French Professor. His command of this brigade of machines is as arbitrary as that of a General in the army over a brigade of troops. The sale of tickets usually begins an hour or so before the race. At each machine stands a man to receive the money paid for tickets, and to turn the crank when a ticket is sold. As fast as the tickets are sold the crank is turned, and the indicator shows the number of tickets sold. When the sale of tickets is stopped, all the numbers in all the machines are added together. This gives the total number of tickets sold. Multiply this number by five, which is the usual price of a single ticket, and you have the amount of money in the machines, which amount is to be divided by the persons buying the winning horse, minus the percentage allowed to the Professor. Should there have been sold but one ticket on the winning horse, then the purchaser gets all the money in the machines minus the percentage. Should there have been ten tickets sold, then the holder of each ticket will get one-tenth of the amount in the machines minus the percentage. When the numbers indicating the number of tickets sold on each horse are not interfered with, and left in sight of the public until the official decision of the race is made by the judges, there is no trouble, and all is fair and just, and the turning of the crank sounds as nice to him who has purchased the winning tickets as the ringing of a wedding bell. But it is said to be the case that sometimes, a few moments before the race is run, the Professors, or an expert for them, may close one or two of the machines, when no one is noticing the indicator, which tells the number of tickets sold, and continue to sell on the number of tickets sold in the closed machines, gives them a chance to do their manipulating. For instance, should a horse win a race on which were sold five tickets, and the manager report ten sold, he will get just one half the money in the machines, thus placing it in his power to manipulate the machines greatly to his advantage. When the race is being run you may sometimes see an expert—as was the practice in France, and caused the abolishment of this system of betting in that country—figuring very industriously with all the numbers out of sight, and the public waiting until the result of the race is announced and his figuring finished, before they can learn the number of tickets sold. When the sale on any of the machines is stopped, the report of the indicator should immediately be placed on a blackboard. The officers of the Coney Island, Baltimore and Long Branch clubs, and perhaps others, require the numbers indicating tickets sold to remain in the machines all the while, exposed to the public to whom they belong, until after the race is decided and announced from the stand. Any interference with the machines after the sale of tickets begin, is indicative of interested manipulation. It was the abuse of this most elegantly and gentlemanly way of betting or laying a wager that induced the turf officials of France to drive these machines from their club grounds and abandon their system of betting, and, as an ounce of prevention is worth a pound cure, we are induced to make these suggestions in due time. The liberal gentlemen of America, both Christian and sinner, are fond of this great national sport, and when they attend the races they must get up a little excitement, so they bet a little, and when they are satisfied that all is fair, and the race and betting is on the square, they come again, and go home happy, win or lose, and there is no trouble with the church, especially if they win.

THE removal of the Rev. J. K. Pace, from Maysville will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends. He is a quiet, unassuming gentleman who will be kindly remembered by all.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the first blood medicine to prove a real success, still holds its place as first in public estimation, both at home and abroad, as shown by its miscellaneous cures and immensely increased sales.

When a cold or other cause checks the operation of the secretory organs, their natural healthy action should be restored by the use of Ayer's Pills, and inflammatory material thereby removed from the system. Much serious sickness and suffering might be prevented by thus promptly correcting those slight derangements that, otherwise, often develop into settled disease.
